This seminar will focus on the four psychological types that Carl Jung described as the functions of thinking, feeling, intuition, and sensation. These functions of consciousness help form our personality and begin to differentiate in early childhood. Typology, in part, determines how we represent and access our world and how we interact in our relationships.

We will explore the patterns of each type and identify ways to find balance and to utilize the assets of each. Looking at film clips ("Spanglish," "Harry Potter," etc.), myth, and fairy tales to bring to life the concepts of personality types, this seminar will be a sharing of insights gained through experience of working with clients in the recovery process. In addition, we will explore how understanding type difference can illuminate relationship: why thinkers bring us clarity and objectivity, why intuitives help us create and imagine, how the sensation function offers stability and consistency, and how the feeler helps us experience compassion and harmony.
