Shamans have a world view that can be useful for individuals as well as for the collective. In Friday's lecture I will discuss this world view and show its usefulness in healing and personal growth. Comparing similarities and differences between Jungian and shamanic thought, I will show how Shamans facilitate one's relationship to the sacred by use of ritual and ceremony to promote inner and outer harmony.

In Saturday's workshop I will describe how Shamans access various perceptual states, each containing elements of the others and all manifesting spirit. Participants will see how the language of these perceptual states differs as does the nature of self reflection as we go from literal to the level of pure energy or spirit. Shamans work to achieve harmony at all the perceptual levels and realize that by perceiving from higher levels, lower levels can be positively affected. Workshop participants will have the opportunity to experience personal shamanic rituals. We plan to have a fire for ritual work, and to lock in the day's lessons. Advance Reading Suggestions: Shaman, Healer, Sage, by Alberto Villoldo and any of Carlos Castaneda's books.

Carl Greer, Psy.D., is a businessman, practicing Jungian analyst in the Chicago area, Clinical Psychologist, and has a shamanic healing practice. Over the course of his career, he has been an entrepreneur and university professor, and has a lifelong interest in the martial arts and Qigong. He has published articles in various journals, served on a number of boards of directors, and taught courses in shamanism and Jungian theory and practice.
